Tovey debuts with Berlioz and Beethoven

British conductor Bramwell Tovey makes his Philadelphia Orchestra debut on Thursday, July 17, with a program including Berlioz’s “Rákóczi” March, from The Damnation of Faust, Beethoven’s Piano Concerto No. 1 with pianist Orion Weiss, and Berlioz’s Symphonie fantastique. Mr. Tovey, who serves as music director of the Vancouver Symphony, was recently appointed principal guest conductor of the Los Angeles Philharmonic at the Hollywood Bowl. He is also host, conductor, and founder of the New York Philharmonic’s Summertime Classics series at Avery Fisher Hall.

The concert opens with Berlioz’s “Rákóczy” March, from The Damnation of Faust. The work takes inspiration from Goethe’s version of the legend of Faust, the wandering conjuror who sells his soul to a devil called Mephistopheles for magical powers and secret knowledge. The “Rákóczy” March appears in the first movement of the work when Faust hears a band playing the march on the plains of Hungary. Berlioz had written the march several years prior to the composition of The Damnation of Faust, when he was advised that success in Hungary would be certain if he were to compose a work based on one of the country’s national tunes. The march was such a stunning success that when writing his new piece, Berlioz could not resist using the successful tune again despite the fact that in the original Faust legend, the character never sets foot in Hungary.

Beethoven’s Piano Concerto No. 1 was first performed by the composer himself in 1795. This piano concerto was not Beethoven’s first attempt at the genre. It was the second piano concerto the composer wrote, but since it was the first to be published it remains forever known as Piano Concerto No. 1. The work itself exudes a youthful, festive energy, so it is only fitting that it is being performed by a youthful soloist – 26-year-old American pianist Orion Weiss, in his Philadelphia Orchestra debut.

The concert closes with Berlioz’s Symphonie fantastique. This vivid and colorful symphony tells the story of the tortured dreams of a lovesick artist who takes an overdose of opium and becomes haunted by visions of an unattainable woman (In real life, Berlioz fell deeply in love with a beautiful Irish actress named Harriet Smithson and his subsequent infatuation is reflected in the symphony). Throughout five movements, the audience is treated to a romance, a ball, a suicide, a guillotine, and a Witch’s Sabbath.

A spectacular fireworks display follows the concert.

In the 2007-08 season, pianist Orion Weiss toured the U.S. with the Orchester der Klangverwaltung Munich; appeared with the Houston, Vancouver, and Albany symphonies and released his debut recording for Yarlung Records. In recent season, he has appeared with the New York, Los Angeles, and Israel philharmonics; Minnesota Orchestra and the Baltimore, New World, San Francisco, Houston and Indianapolis symphonies.

As a recitalist and chamber musician, Mr. Weiss has appeared at venues and festivals including New York’s Alice Tully Hall and Weill Recital Hall, Paris’ Musée du Louvre, Atlanta’s Spivey Hall, Chamber Music Northwest, the Ravinia Festival, the Bard Music Festival, and the Seattle and Bridgehampton chamber music festivals. He was a member of the Chamber Music Society Two program of the Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center from 2002-04.

A native of Lyndhurst, Ohio, Mr. Weiss attended the Cleveland Institute of Music, where he studied with Paul Schenly. He graduated from the Juilliard School in 2004 where he studied with Emanuel Ax and was winner of the 2005 Juilliard William Petschek Award and the Gina Bachauer Scholarship. Mr. Weiss’s other awards include the Gilmore Young Artist Award, an Avery Fisher Career Grant, and the Mieczyslaw Munz Scholarship. He also received first prize honors at the Akron Youth Symphony, Cleveland Philharmonic, Music Academy of the West, Venitia Hall, and Cleveland Institute of Music concerto competitions. He has been featured in Musical America as well as Symphony magazine.

Currently in his eighth season as music director of the Vancouver Symphony, Bramwell Tovey’s recent and upcoming highlights with that ensemble include a Grammy Award-winning recording with violinist James Ehnes, a six-concert Beethoven festival, and a tour to China in fall 2008. Recently Mr. Tovey was appointed principal guest conductor of the Los Angeles Philharmonic at the Hollywood Bowl. He is also host, conductor, and founder of the New York Philharmonic’s Summertime Classics series at Avery Fisher Hall. Prior to his appointment in Vancouver, Mr. Tovey served as music director of the Winnipeg Symphony (2002-2006) and the Luxembourg Philharmonic (2002-2006).

As a guest conductor, Mr. Tovey has led the London Philharmonic; the London, Bournemouth, and North Netherlands symphonies; and the Frankfurt Radio and Royal Scottish National orchestras, among others. In North America, he has appeared with the orchestras of Saint Louis, Pittsburgh, Detroit, Seattle, Toronto, and Montreal. This performance marks his Philadelphia Orchestra debut.

Also a composer, Mr. Tovey has received commissions from the Calgary Opera and the New York and Los Angeles philharmonics. He is the recipient of the 2003 Juno Award for Best Canadian Classical Composition for Requiem for a Charred Skull. He has also made two recordings as a jazz pianist.

Mr. Tovey has received fellowships from the Royal Academy of Music in London and the Royal Conservatory of Music in Toronto and honorary doctorates of law from the universities of Winnipeg and Manitoba, and Kwantlen University College. In 1999 he received the M. Joan Chalmers National Award for Artistic Direction.

Josefowicz plays Mendelssohn; Orchestra plays Ginastera and Musorgsky

On Friday, July 18, conductor Giancarlo Guerrero returns to the Mann Center with a program juxtaposing works by Ginastera and Musorgsky with Mendelssohn’s Violin Concerto performed by violinist Leila Josefowicz. The performance is dedicated to the memory of Anne d’Harmoncourt, Director and CEO of the Philadelphia Museum of Art, who passed away on June 1 of this year. The Philadelphia Orchestra Association and The Mann Center for the Performing Arts join the art museum and the City of Philadelphia in honoring her life and celebrating her legacy.

Leila Josefowicz, who made her Philadelphia Orchestra debut at the Mann Center in 1992, returns to perform Mendelssohn’s Violin Concerto, one of the most beloved and popular concertos in the repertoire. The mood of the concerto spans a wide range, from the passionate opening, through the unadorned lyricism of the slow movement, to the sparkle of the finale.

Alberto Ginastera was one of the most influential Argentines of the 20th century and also probably the most significant Latin-American composer of his generation. His Suite from Estancia, portrays the changing times of day on an Argentine ranch. His abundant use of traditional Argentine gaucho music makes for a rough, brash, and bracingly rhythmic piece.
The concert closes with Musorgsky's beloved Pictures at an Exhibition, written by the composer to perpetuate the memory of a friend, artist Viktor Hartmann. The composer takes the audience on a musical art walk illustrating ten of Hartmann’s pieces, with a recurring “Promenade” theme to illustrate the viewer's progress from painting to painting.

Highlights of violinist Leila Josefowicz’s 2007-08 season included engagements with the Los Angeles Philharmonic, the Minnesota Orchestra, and the Atlanta, Cincinnati, Dallas, Indianapolis, New Jersey, Saint Louis, and Utah symphonies; her subscription debut with the Chicago Symphony; a Philadelphia recital; and a chamber music concert at the 92nd St. Y in New York.

Ms. Josefowicz’s recent and upcoming appearances in Europe and Asia include performances with the Royal Concertgebouw and Leipzig Gewandhaus orchestras; the London, Munich, Czech, and Hong Kong philharmonics; the City of Birmingham and BBC symphonies; a tour with the London Symphony, and her fourth London Proms appearance. In North America, she recently appeared with the Cleveland and American Composers orchestras, the New York Philharmonic, the San Francisco, Toronto, National, Detroit, Baltimore, and Pittsburgh symphonies; and in recitals throughout the U.S. In coming seasons she will premiere works written for her by Steven Mackey and Colin Matthews. She made her Philadelphia Orchestra debut in 1992.

Ms. Josefowicz has made several recordings for the Philips Classics label. Her other discs include a live recording of John Adams’s Violin Concerto on the BBC label; a Grammy-nominated recording of Adams’s Road Movies, for Nonesuch; and a recital disc and a CD of Shostakovich’s Violin Concerto No. 1 with the City of Birmingham Symphony for Warner Classics.

A recipient of an Avery Fisher Career Grant in 1994, Ms. Josefowicz is a graduate of the Curtis Institute of Music, where she studied with Jaime Laredo, Jascha Brodsky, and Felix Galimir. Ms. Josefowicz plays a 1724 Guarneri del Gesù violin.

Costa Rican conductor Giancarlo Guerrero was recently appointed music director of the Nashville Symphony, where he begins as music director designate in the 2008-09 season. He made his Philadelphia Orchestra debut at the Mann Center in 2005. Earlier this year, he completed his sixth season as music director of the Eugene Symphony. Mr. Guerrero also served as associate conductor of the Minnesota Orchestra from 1999-2004 and as music director of the Tachira Symphony in Venezuela.

During the 2007-08 season Mr. Guerrero made guest conducting appearances with the Cleveland Orchestra and the Dallas, Kansas City, Milwaukee, San Antonio, and San Diego symphonies. He also led the Australian premiere of Osvaldo Golijov’s Ainadamar at the Adelaide Festival.

As a guest conductor, Mr. Guerrero recently made his European debut with the Gulbenkian Orchestra and his U.K. debut with the Royal Scottish National Orchestra. He has also led the orchestras of Baltimore, Los Angeles Philharmonic at the Hollywood Bowl, and Seattle, and appearances with the orchestras of Columbus, Detroit, Houston, and Indianapolis among others.
